Message from the Director

› Dear Friends,

Formally created in 2010, the Lisbon Consortium has made itself into a landmark of postgraduate research, through the critical engagement with a ‘transferable model’ of knowledge production between academia, business and the sites of creation in the city of Lisbon.

We welcome creative minds with a potential to contribute to an energizing intellectual environment and with an entrepreneurial mindset. The Master’s program is ranked as 4th best in the world. This success is the result of the team at Católica, the committed support of the partner institutions in Lisbon and the creativity of our students.

At the Lisbon Consortium, we cherish ideas, we nurture grounded critique, we promote exploratory thinking and entrepreneurial innovation. We are passionate about the sizzling environment of Lisbon, a true hub of European creativity, and a fantastic location with great quality of life.

Our motto is thinking ahead.

Welcome to the Lisbon Consortium!

Isabel Capelo Gil

PROGRAM DIRECTOR

WHAT IS THE LISBON CONSORTIUM?

What is the Lisbon Consortium?

- › The Lisbon Consortium is a network between the Master's and Doctoral Degree Programs in Culture Studies at Universidade Católica Portuguesa and prestigious cultural institutions in Lisbon.

The aim of this network is to promote advanced training in the field of Culture Studies as well as the professional integration of students. This collaborative network brings together theory, applied research, cultural programming and management.

The Lisbon Consortium is a unique and innovative cooperation program with an international focus, ranked No. 4 in the world by the Eduniversal Best Master's Ranking in Cultural Management/Creative Industries Management in 2019.

The Lisbon Consortium is structured in accordance with four fundamental principles:

- inter-institutional cooperation;
- excellence in research;
- creativity and cultural entrepreneurship;
- social responsibility in the production of knowledge.

Mission

- › The scope of Lisbon Consortium activities is as follows:
- Coordination of academic activities with partner cultural institutions in Lisbon, granting due accreditation.
 - Organization of thematic seminars/workshops in conjunction with partner institutions.
 - Development of research projects with the objective of studying and promoting the partners' cultural and heritage assets.
 - Professional integration by means of internships in the partner institutions through the Lisbon Consortium career office.
 - Annual organization of the Lisbon Summer School for the Study of Culture (July), with the participation of the partners, national and international academics, artists and curators.
 - Doctoral double degrees with international partners (Justus-Liebig University Giessen, University of Copenhagen and PUC-Rio, Brazil)

He is the author of the videoessay N for Negri (2000), as well as numerous texts, essays and publications.

Daniel Blaufuks has been working on the relation between photography and literature, through works like My Tangier with the writer Paul Bowles. More recently, Collected Short Stories displays several photographic diptychs in a kind of “snapshot prose,” a speech based on visual fragments that give indication of private stories on their way to become public. The relation between public and private has been one of the constant interrogations in his work. He has been showing widely and works mainly in photography and video, presenting his work through books, installations and films. His documentary Under Strange Skies was shown at the Lincoln Center in New York.

Recent exhibitions include: Calouste Gulbenkian Foundation, Lisbon, Palazzo delle Papesse, Siena, LisboaPhoto, Centro Cultural de Belém, Lisbon, Elga Wimmer Gallery, New York, Museu do Chiado, Lisboa, Photoespaña, Madrid, where his book Under Strange Skies received the award for Best Photography Book of the Year in the International Category in 2007, the year he received the BES Photo Award as well. He published Terezín at Steidl, Göttingen in 2010 and in 2011 he had a solo show at the Museum of Modern Art in Rio de Janeiro and in 2014 at the National Museum of Contemporary Art in Lisbon. In 2017 he was awarded the AICA-MC Award for the exhibitions Léxico and Attempting Exhaustion in the previous year. He has a PhD from the University of Wales. DEGREE PROGRAMS

MA in Culture Studies

Ranked #4 by the Eduniversal Best Master's Ranking in Cultural Management/Creative Industries Management, the Master's Program in Culture Studies is aimed at graduate students from the Humanities and Social Sciences, interested in a structured discussion of cultural phenomena in the global world.

The program has three specializations:

- Management of the Arts and Culture
- Performance and Creativity
- Literary Cultures

The program is organized around a core course of theory and practice-based seminars. Each seminar provides a broad scope for interdisciplinary interaction through the interplay between disciplines ranging across the fields of Cultural Studies, Literary and Artistic Studies, Performance, Translation, Media and Visual Studies as well as Cultural Management.

The MA in Culture Studies takes into direct consideration the ever increasing value that the arts and culture represent to the understanding and the identity of nations and individuals, as well as the importance of the creative economy in an era marked by globalization, flux and rapid cultural dissemination.

Based upon an innovative training model and collaborative effort between academic and cultural institutions, the program operates through epistemological reciprocity, demonstrating how cultural practices illuminate critical reflection.

The program is entirely taught in English.

PhD in Culture Studies

- › The Doctoral Program in Culture Studies is a four-year research program for students in the Humanities and Social Sciences as well as professionals from the cultural sector, involved both in the cultural industries (museums, foundations, publishers) or the creative industries, who wish to advance their university education within a theoretically solid and groundbreaking framework.

The Doctoral Program in Culture Studies takes into direct consideration the ever-increasing value that the arts and culture represent to the understanding and the identity of nations and individuals, in an era marked by globalization and rapid cultural dissemination. The program focuses on problem-oriented and practice-based research and provides broad ranging opportunities for interdisciplinary interaction through a significant range of disciplinary options from the fields of Cultural Studies, Contemporary Art, Performance Studies, Literature, Translation, Media and Visual Studies.

The program is born out of the commitment to develop a doctoral program that promotes both high level research training at the forefront of scientific interest and responds to the cultural sector's growing call for highly qualified professionals. It is inspired by the 'collaborative turn' on two levels: firstly as a model of advanced research training that draws from artistic practice and cultural management to reflect on theory and in turn embeds practice in theoretically informed premises; secondly as a form of doctoral training that is transnational by definition, because the study of culture inevitably deals with diversity.

The program is entirely taught in English.

International Doctoral Program in Culture Studies – INTDCS (FCT PhD Program)

➤ The International Doctoral Program in Culture Studies is a joint-degree programme in Culture Studies awarded by Universidade Católica Portuguesa, the University of Giessen and the University of Copenhagen. It builds from different disciplines in the humanities and the social sciences, thereby assuming the interdisciplinarity of contemporary modes of knowledge production focused on problem-oriented and practice-based research.

As part of a tri-national network, students will benefit from up to two semesters at one of the partner institutions in order to conduct empirical or theoretical research. The stay abroad is part of the co-tutelle agreement and will also allow the candidate to work with the second supervisor. A work program will be established for the duration of the stay at the partner institution.

Within the framework of the many exchange agreements between the three partner universities, CECC and their international counterparts, candidates may apply for an additional stay as a visiting researcher, especially if considered of particular importance to the research project.

PhDnet in Literary and Cultural Studies

- › As part of the International Graduate Centre for the Study of Culture (GCSC), the European PhDnet “Literary and Cultural Studies” at Justus Liebig University (JLU) Giessen constitutes an international network between JLU, the doctoral program for philosophy, arts and society at the University of Helsinki and the doctoral programs in literary and cultural studies at the University of Bergamo, Universidade Católica Portuguesa, the University of Stockholm and the University of Graz.

Members of the PhDnet pursue their doctoral studies at JLU and one of the five partner institutions, where their projects are jointly supervised. Moreover, they are awarded bi-national degrees.

The PhDnet “Literary and Cultural Studies” offers a clearly structured doctoral program of high academic standard and with a distinctively international orientation. Joint events (symposia, conferences, master classes) implement the tight network structures envisioned in the PhDnet.

Cognition and Creativity

Prof. Ana Margarida Abrantes

› Syllabus

The seminar will focus on the following topics:

- What is creativity? How can it be studied? Conceptions of creativity and perspectives for its study. A cognitive approach to creativity.
- From mimesis to creativity: the evolutionary approach in the study of creativity. Where does creativity come from? And what is it good for? How creative are modern humans?
- The cognitive conditions for creativity. Creativity and other cognitive abilities. Memory, distributed cognition, situated cognition. Individual and social mind. Creativity and imagination.
- Creativity, cognition and culture. Cultural chances and constrains for creative thinking.
- Creativity and the arts. The cognitive underpinnings of aesthetic production.
- Discourse, multimodality and creativity. Creativity in language and communication.
- The dark side: on creativity and madness.
- Automating creativity: AI and other (future) challenges for creativity

› Learning Outcomes

Objectives

The focus of this seminar is twofold: on the one hand, we will tackle the cognitive conditions for creativity and their neural underpinnings, as well as the relation of creativity with other cognitive capacities, such as memory, imagination and distributed and situated cognition. On the other hand creativity will be reflected from the cultural perspective, with respect to its different manifestations in social and cultural life: from art to science, from discourse to multimodality. The overall underlying question for the seminar will be how creativity arises in the intersection of a pan-human setup of the mind and the specificity of social environments and human cultures.

Participants should be able to frame the subject of creativity on the interface between cognitive science and the study of culture, so as to account for the cognitive conditions for creativity and the variety of its manifestations in cultural life.

Competences

Students should acknowledge and explain the link between cognition and culture, with regard to creativity. They should be able to identify key issues concerning the cognitive dimension of creativity, as well as to draw the scope and impact of creative manifestations in culture.

➤ Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

Teaching Methodologies

Discussion of relevant study topics in class. Prior reading of key texts, presentation of main issues in class and debate.

Evaluation

- Qualitative participation in class 30%
- Oral presentation of a text/topic 30%
- Final written assignment 40%

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be awarded for the assignment.

Contemporary Culture and the Environment

Prof. Diana Gonçalves

› Syllabus

I. Culture and Environment

- Theoretical introduction and definition of key concepts.

II. Cultural environment

- Nature as construct;
- The modification of natural space and the urban space;
- (Re)imagination of the contemporary landscape (thoughts on space, place and time).

III. Culture of disaster

- Anthropocene: environmental problems in contemporary society and the human impact on nature;
- Natural and man-made disasters or the socio-cultural construction of disaster;
- The afterlife of disaster: memory and representation.

IV. Culture and ecology

- From ecoawareness to ecoactivism to ecoterrorism;
- Toward an integral ecology.

➤ Learning Outcomes

The Contemporary Culture and the Environment seminar aims at investigating the relationship between culture and environment in contemporary society. Using the discussion of pre-selected material as starting point, it intends to study the role of environment in present-day society and the impact of human action on nature.

It is expected that students develop a reflexive discourse about the curricular unit's thematic; that they understand the different and complex ways in which culture and environment intersect; and that they seek to critically analyze theory and apply it to case studies.

➤ Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

The seminar is organized in 16 sessions that articulate lectures on the topics listed in the course syllabus and the critical analysis of selected reading material. The program of each session will be distributed ahead of time in order to allow students to properly prepare the discussion of the theme.

The system of evaluation consists in the continuous assessment of students. Evaluation takes into account the following criteria:

- Participation (discussion of proposed themes, analysis and interpretation of mandatory readings, other assignments) 25%
- Oral presentation 25%
- Final essay 50%

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be awarded for the assignment.

Cultural Economics

Prof. Ricardo Ferreira Reis

› Syllabus

Part I Cultural goods and services.

Got microeconomics?

- a. Markets: How perfect markets do not apply to cultural goods. Monopoly power and originality.
- b. Demand and elasticity: inferior, superior goods and culture. The test of time. Commercial culture or culture for the masses? Fine art as investment.
- c. Supply and cost: culture has no price? Does it have a cost? The debate on intellectual property.

Part II The role of Culture in the Economy.

Got macroeconomics?

- a. GDP and cultural value added: What is the GDP of a country? Does it capture the Wealth of a Nation?
- b. The cultural industries: who are they, what roles do they play, how do they contribute? Is culture a necessity or a luxury in the economy?
- c. Do cultural policies create value, does Culture promote innovation and human development?

Part III Managing Culture

- a. Not for profit organizations? Foundations and trusts. Public entities and the role of the state.
- b. Cultural corporations and the privatization of culture.

› Learning Outcomes

Objectives

The objective of this course is primarily to make you think of an unlikely match between economics and culture.

In order to raise awareness of the economic dimensions within the cultural activities, we look at this in both directions:

- 1) How do economic concepts affect the production of cultural goods;
- 2) What role does culture play in the field of economics

An additional goal:

- 3) is to relate all these concepts with the day to day management of cultural entities.

Competences

Students are expected to:

- understand basic concepts of microeconomics that cultural agents should identify underlying their activities;
- understand basic concepts of macroeconomics where culture can be empowered within the economic field;
- problematize the relation between culture and economics in contemporary market economies, namely through the notion of “creative economy”;
- apply this knowledge to the practice of cultural management.

› Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

Teaching Methodologies

The teaching methodology is both theoretical and practical and will combine the survey of economic theory and case studies from the field of cultural economy.

Evaluation

Evaluation is continuous and comprises the following elements:

- Completion of assignments respecting the given deadlines, active participation of quality, and attendance 15%
- Case report 25%
- Final exam 60%

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be awarded for the assignment.

› Learning Outcomes

To reflect on the complexity of the phenomenon of globalization and its impact on contemporary society in a context of conflict.

To understand the concept of globalization from diverse theoretical-methodological perspectives.

To reflect on how and to what extent the phenomenon of globalization is inscribed in the project of modernity and constitutes one of its transforming forces.

To reflect on the impact of globalization on the reconfiguration of the Westphalian model of Nation-state.

To discuss the meanings and challenges of cultural globalization in the 21st century.

To examine the potentialities of culture as an emancipatory resource of modernity in the configuration of a “geography of proximity” (Derrida 2000).

› Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

Teaching Methodologies

Theoretical-practical lessons; analysis of essays, videos, films, and exhibitions; group discussion.

Evaluation

Assessment is continuous and attendance is mandatory (students must attend at least 2/3 of sessions). The following criteria will be taken into account:

- Attendance and participation of quality; completion of individual or group assignments; discussion of essays and films 25%
- Take-home exam 35%
- Essay 40%

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be awarded for the assignment.

Culture, Production and Creativity

Prof. Peter Hanenberg

› Syllabus

The seminar addresses the intimate relation between culture, production and creativity and their potential to mutual enhancement. It starts with a general reflection on creativity in its historical perspective. A special focus is giving to the cognitive groundings of creativity, both in its concrete contemporary disposition and across cultures. Creativity has gained a central function in concepts like Creative Industries or Creative Cities which establish a challenging framework in which creativity works as a means to productivity and growth. Cross fertilization between different sectors (like arts, technology and economy) and the promises of free culture characterize the dynamics of empowerment which asks both for practical understanding and critical inquiry. Thus, the seminar will deal with the following topics:

- what is creativity?
- creativity and culture, the arts and the brain behind
- creativity across cultures or on the use of difference
- creative industries and its classes
- creative cities and smart development
- hybrid thinking, design thinking and cross innovation
- produce for free? open access to culture and creativity
- against creativity

› Learning Outcomes

Objectives

Introduction to the contemporary challenges in the relation between culture, productivity and creativity.

Competences

- To be able to understand the concept of creativity
- To be able to identify the relation between culture, production and creativity
- To be able to understand, the role and value of creativity in and for contemporary culture and economy
- To develop a well-grounded understanding and creative approaches in cultural production.

➤ Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

Teaching

The seminary will focus on the discussion of current research issues. It requests regular readings.

Evaluation

- Continuous cooperation 20%
- Oral presentation and debate 30%
- Essay 50%

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be awarded for the assignment.

Curatorial Practices

Prof. Luísa Santos

› Syllabus

The Curatorial Practices Lab is designed to immerse students in a rigorous schedule of conversations and presentations that contextualise, at theoretical and practical levels, the processes of developing an idea for an exhibition or other curatorial programme into a full proposal. The Lab will include a series of presentations on curatorial methodologies and roles. Discussions range from the practical side of exhibition-making and connecting with different artists to the theoretical aspects of expanding upon research and communicating ideas successfully. In the second half of the Lab, students will be asked to draw a curatorial proposal based on the ideas addressed in the first half of the programme. Students will then implement their proposals. Regular visits to exhibitions and other cultural events are of utmost importance to the development of the curatorial projects or programmes.

Part I

1. Thinking Contemporary Art
 - 1.1 Key concepts, terms, and methodologies in modern and contemporary art history
 - 1.2 Discursive and cultural shifts: focusing on artworks, exhibitions, and presentational models
 - 1.3 Artworks and their various historical, social, cultural, and theoretical contexts
2. History and Practice of Curating
 - 2.1 History of museums, galleries, and exhibition spaces
 - 2.2 The diverse typologies of art institutions
 - 2.3 The proliferation of Biennials
 - 2.4 Social practices and curatorial practices
3. What does mediation do?
 - 3.1 Mediation VS Pedagogical
 - 3.2 Public programming: the relationship of an event or exhibition to its potential audience

Part II

1. Producing and Curating Contemporary Art
 - 1.1 The steps in producing an exhibition / curatorial project / programme

- 1.2 The curatorial elements of an exhibition / curatorial project / programme
- 1.3 Funding an exhibition / curatorial project / programme
- 1.4 Planning the plan: the visual narrative in the exhibition space

2. Final Project Development

› Learning Outcomes

Learning outcomes

The seminar in Curatorial Practices aims to introduce the student to the understanding of the different levels of meaning, at conceptual and practical levels, of curating contemporary art whilst developing the ability to critically reflect on the historical, social and ethical contexts when creating and implementing a curatorial project or programme.

Competences

Seminar activities are also designed to develop students' ability to: understand the concept of curating contemporary art; identify and discuss various parameters in curating, in their relationship to contemporary art; develop a well grounded understanding and creative approaches in curatorial practices; capacity to conceptualize, develop and implement a curatorial project or programme with all the practicalities that such a process implies; write well and independently about contemporary art; perform independent research on a chosen subject; acknowledge the relevance of mediation and its different levels in curatorial practices; develop an original curatorial project or programme and present it visually, orally and in writing.

› Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

Teaching Methodologies

The seminar will consist of lecturing with engaged discussion and active participation. The assignments encourage students to develop research and critical analysis skills in the area of Curatorial Practices. Students will be introduced to institutional procedures for presenting and proposing projects. Regular class attendance is essential.

Evaluation

- The evaluation is continuous and progressive. The final assessment is based on:
- Class participation and attendance 20%
- Final assignment 80%

Proposal-idea for a curatorial project or programme (such as but not limited to: exhibition; film programme; seminar series; lecture; publication / book) for a previously identified space. Proposals must have in consideration the theoretical topics addressed in the Seminar as well as the practical aspects of proposing and implementing a curatorial project or programme. The project must include the following elements: one text for exhibition guide / max. 1200 words, double spaced, Times New Roman 12; one Wall text / max. 500 words / double spaced, Times New Roman 12; list of artists with edited biographies (1 paragraph each); list of works with duly credited images with full captions; list of in kind and financial supports; simplified budget; and exhibition plan with location of works. Form, organization, argument, and creativity will be favoured. All projects will be subject to an external guest jury – this will serve for individual feedback but will not have an influence in the final mark.

(Please NOTE: the list of contents for the proposal-idea for the project is indicative. Students will realise one project collectively. Budget and details will be presented and discussed in the first half of the Seminar series)

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be awarded for the assignment.

Discourse and Identity

Prof. Alexandra Lopes

› Syllabus

The course aims to highlight the ways in which narrative – and particularly literary and filmic narrative – both shapes and stages identities. The program will focus on two moments: (a) discussion of the miseries and splendours of autodiegesis and (b) reflexion on the (un)bearable marginality of non-hegemonic voices. The comparison between these two narrative loci invites reflection on the ways in which (race, gender, language) identities will be staged within the narrative space over time, thereby disclosing narrative discourse as a place of translation and transgression because it is space of every possibility.

› Learning Outcomes

Goals

1. to discuss the concept of 'identity' in articulation with the concept of 'discourse': the role of voice in agency, minorities and public space, (in)visibilities and the question of power;
2. to question the seemingly stable identity in the light of the multiplicity of identities in the post-imperial and global Western geography of the present-day;
3. to enquire how the literary discourse creates and shapes the notion of 'identity'.

Skills

1. to reflect critically on the ways discursive practices shape identity;
2. to read literary tradition against a theoretical backdrop of 20th and 21st narratives;
3. to discuss literary narratives as cultural objects;
4. to be able to understand and discuss the literary complexity of our present-day imaginings and imagination.

➤ Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

Teaching Methodologies

The seminar is organized in sixteen sessions, which will include expository moments as well as debate with and among students. The specific contents of each session will be made public in advance, together with a list of specific readings, so that students are able to prepare the assigned texts and the debate.

Assessment

Student assessment is continuous, which means that critical reflection on the texts and topics to be discussed and quality interventions are most welcome (15%). In addition, students will be required to prepare and present oral assignments (15%) and to submit a travelogue (20%) and a final written paper (50%).

Sine qua non conditions for approval in the seminar are the ability and willingness to reflect and discuss the proposed issues and texts, a thorough command of the Portuguese (or English, as the case may be) language and the capacity for serious research.

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be awarded for the assignment.

Grad Labs – Academic Writing

Prof. Rita Faria

› Syllabus

This course is designed as a series of hands-on sessions in which students (a) are expected to develop their ongoing research projects as well as (b) are encouraged to share their ideas and work collaboratively, so as to improve their overall academic performance.

The curricular unit is made up of 24 sessions, organized in the abovementioned modules.

› Learning Outcomes

Academic writing

the main goal of Academic Writing is to prepare students for effectively engaging in advanced written communication in an academic environment. Students will develop theoretical and practical skills to successfully read and write academic texts, and to differentiate the specificities of academic writing from other genres, namely the literary and media texts. Special attention will be paid to textual organisation and coherence and to the argumentative requirements of academic writing. Considering the multicultural makeup of the program's student cohort, students will also explore differences across academic communities, and critically examine the implications of the dominant position of academic discourses in English in a global context. Attention will also be paid to different varieties of the English language and the ideological implications of selecting and using a particular linguistic variety.

➤ Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

The teaching methodology is theoretical and practical. Sessions will promote practical strategies to enhance students' academic profile through the survey of theoretical questions and practical exercises. Students are expected to bring their ongoing research work (abstracts, papers, chapters, etc.) to be improved through the practical strategies presented in class.

Assessment: evaluation will be entirely based on the work developed during the sessions, so please remember that attendance is mandatory.

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be awarded for the assignment.

Management of Cultural Projects

Prof. Luísa Santos

› Syllabus

The Seminar in Management of Cultural Projects combines, in a first phase, a series of participative conversations with presentations that contextualize at theoretical and practical levels, the processes of development of a cultural project. In the second part of the Seminar, students will develop and present a proposal of a cultural project. Students will also acquire theoretical knowledge that will enable them to critically analyse cultural projects.

Part I

- 1. Management and Culture: Introduction
 - 1.1 Theory of Management: some definitions (Mintzberg, Porter, Klein) and their applicability to the Arts
 - 1.2 Strategic Planning and decision making
- 2. Finance in the Arts and Culture
 - 2.1 Models of public funding VS Models of private funding
 - 2.2 Global activity: partnerships
 - 2.3 The economic dilemma of the arts
 - 2.4 Impact of the financial crisis on the arts: how some sources of funding were drying up when others emerged
 - 2.5 Governance and accountability
- 3. The different roles in cultural management
 - 3.1 The different types of institutions: discourses and missions
 - 3.2 Cultural managers, cultural producers and cultural agents
 - 3.3 Cultural projects and multidisciplinary teams
 - 3.4 Philanthropy
 - 3.5 The audience
- 4. The social role of arts and culture;
- 5. The relevance of diversity and dynamism in cultural projects' management.

Part II Development and presentation of a Cultural Project

1. The life cycle of projects applied to culture;
2. Identity and communication in cultural projects;

Presenting a project: communicate ideas effectively.

› Learning Outcomes

Learning outcomes

The Seminar in Management of Cultural Projects aims to introduce the students to the critical understanding and analysis of the role of culture, the cultural agents and institutions in contemporary society. Students will develop management capacities in the field of culture.

Competences

Seminar activities are also designed to develop students' ability to: develop ideas into concrete and comprehensible proposals; planning of a coherent and significant cultural project in its different phases; understanding of the importance of teamwork as well while developing leadership capacities in the management of excellence cultural and artistic projects; understanding of the differences of the various roles of cultural agents and institutions; capacity to evaluate cultural projects.

› Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

Teaching Methodologies

The seminar will consist of lecturing with engaged discussion and active participation. The assignments encourage students to develop research and critical analysis skills in the area of Cultural Management. Students will be introduced to a series of national and international case studies. Regular class attendance is essential.

Evaluation

The evaluation is continuous and progressive. The final assessment is based on:

- Class participation and attendance 10%
 - Fundraising plan for a cultural project with oral presentation 30%
 - Development and presentation of cultural project
proposal, max. 3000 words / double spaced,
Times New Roman 12 60%
- Proposal-idea for a cultural project – it should take into consideration not only the various theoretical aspects addressed in the Seminar but also the practicalities that managing a project imply as well as a reflection on its governance and accountability.

The practical part of the project must be articulated with the theoretical framework.

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be awarded for the assignment.

Metaculture

Prof. Isabel Capeloa Gil,

Prof. Adriana Martins, Sarah Nagaty

› Syllabus

The syllabus will focus on the manifold ways in which cultural discourse reflects on culture's general conditions of existence. Along the 15 weeks of the seminar, a conversation shall ensue around cultural discourse in the 20th and 21st centuries, from Critical Theory to the post critical ecologies of culture.

I – From culture to metaculture: The Study of Culture as an academic discipline.

II – Schools, questions and trends:

1. Critical theory and the politics of culture
2. Deconstruction and post-structuralism and the nature of culture
3. Cultural Studies and the socialization of culture
4. The post-critical and post-human turn

III – Theories and authors

1. Sigmund Freud and the psicoanthropology of culture
2. T. Adorno and Marx Horkheimer and the cultural industry
3. Roland Barthes and the textual turn
4. Raymond William's structure of feeling
5. On representation: Michel Foucault

IV – Culture matters

1. Culture as infrastructure (Raymond Williams/Gilles Deleuze)
2. Identity politics and cultural rights
3. Coloniality at the time of the post-colonial
4. Globalization and cosmopolitanism
5. Post-cultural ecologies

➤ Learning Outcomes

The syllabus will focus on the manifold ways in which cultural discourse self-reflexively reflects on culture's general conditions of existence. Students are expected to develop an increased awareness about the complexity of the contemporary world by dint of the critical conceptual tools of the discipline. They are encouraged to understand the epistemological formations of contemporaneity, to reflect critically on their different positions and to aptly and convincingly use the tools and the discourse of the scientific community.

➤ Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

Teaching Methodologies

Course work will focus on the discussion of core texts and extoll into an informed conversation about the metacultural discourse and its social, political, environmental and economical impacts. Methodologically, the seminar shall be dealt with in a mix of empirical-interpretative approaches and case based analyses. The instructors shall apply continuous assessment drawing from both reading and discussion assignments and a final exam. Students will also be required to participate in the Metaculture Discussion Hub (MDH), a weekly tutorial.

Evaluation

- Continuous assessment 35%
- Final exam 65%

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be awarded for the assignment.

Metaculture I

Prof. Luísa Leal de Faria

› Syllabus

The course will focus on twelve core topics:

1. What is the meaning of “metaculture”.
2. Problems in the analysis of culture.
3. Academics, intellectuals and the study of culture – questions of hegemony, authority and responsibility.
4. The Enlightenment Project and Its Critique.
5. Modernity, post-modernity and after.
6. Cultural discourses – the Frankfurt School.
7. Cultural discourses – French critique.
8. Neo-liberal culture.
9. Surveillance, control, power.
10. Cultural policy.
11. Different approaches to culture studies.
12. Questions about the future.

Each topic is supported by a corpus of texts already defined and published in a sourcebook. The program will address and explore the contemporary conditions of cultural production, based on the general assumption that the position of seeing and speaking and writing in metacultural discourse, the kind of subject any individual ‘becomes’ in practicing it, is culture itself.

› Learning Outcomes

The purpose of this core course is the study of metacultural discourse. By metacultural discourse we mean that in which culture, however defined, speaks of itself. More precisely, it is discourse in which culture addresses its own generality and conditions of existence. It is, therefore, a historically formed set of topics and procedures that both drives and regulates the utterance of the individuals who inhabit it, and assigns them definite positions in the field of meaning it delimits.

Students are expected to develop an increased awareness about the complexity of the contemporary world, and to develop adequate tools to adopt critical and intervenient positions as cultural agents. Through the consistent study of cultural discourses students will be equipped to understand the specificities of epistemic formations in different cultures at different points in time, particularly since the early 19th century up to the present day. A metacultural approach to the study of culture will also expose the students to a variety of critical positions inviting dialogue, tolerance and mutual understanding.

➤ Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

Teaching Methodologies

The work will be developed in seminar format, around the analysis of subjects previously prepared by the students, according to a pre-defined reading program. The nuclear texts for this program will be made available to the students. Each major subject will be contextualized within a theoretical framework and the students will be expected to present, in the context of the seminar, at least one paper each, on the different subjects of the program, to be made available to the colleagues and discussed in class. At the end of the semester the students will present a full written paper.

Final evaluation

- Paper presented in class 40%
- Contributions to the debates 10%
- Final paper 50%

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be awarded for the assignment.

3. Mohsin Hamid, Exit West (2017)
4. Future as a transformative cultural device: Star Wars Phantom Menace (1999)

› Learning Outcomes

Goals

Metaculture II dwells on fear as accelerator of cultural processes. The seminar builds from theory produced on the cusp of psychohistory, cultural and political theory, as well as psychoanalysis and theory of fiction. The seminar shall organize discussions around three main drivers: technological disruption, democracy and the anthropology of difference and on the selective reading and viewing of representative texts and films. Fear shall be discussed and analyzed as a driver of cultural driven societal transformation. Furthermore the seminar wishes to make the student able to contextualize, interpret and critique the object of study and place it comparatively within the larger body of cultural studies.

Competencies

Apart from advanced communication and written skills, the seminar aims to foster a global understanding of culture and the field of studies commonly known as cultural studies. Furthermore the seminar aims to develop in the student intercultural competencies arising from a comparative approach and contribute to foster a critical reasoning supported by informed academic arguments. The student will be able to diagnose a problem, to place it in its socio-cultural context and compare it to similar or contrastive cultural realities as well as to interpret and discuss it using the scientific language of its own academic community.

› Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

Teaching Methodologies

The seminar will consist of lecturing, joint discussion of assigned reading and practical analysis. Sessions will promote practice-based learning and bring together the close reading of theoretical texts with case studies which will take representative examples across media.

Evaluation

Evaluation is based on the principle of continuous and progressive assessment. It will assess students' skills in producing an autonomous and coherent critical discourse and the ability to develop original and theoretically sound approaches to chosen case studies. As a doctoral seminar, autonomous original research will also be assessed in the final paper. Participation is particularly encouraged.

Students who fail to attend 2/3 of sessions will not pass. Assignments for the course include close reading of texts. Learning assessment is based on the following items and percentages:

- Continuous assessment (participation and oral presentations) 20%
- Term paper (15 pages, double spaced, Times New Roman 12; MLA citation rules) 80%

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be posted for the assignment.

Methods of Cultural Analysis

Prof. Diana Gonçalves

› Syllabus

1. Why does culture matter?
 - What is Cultural Studies?
 - What is cultural analysis?
2. Charting the field
 - Key players, ideas and notions
3. Where research begins
 - The academic work
 - Developing academic work – research question, object, theory and practices
4. Finding the right strategy
 - Empirical, interpretative, ethnographic – an overview
5. Applying methods
 - Textual analysis
 - Visual analysis
 - Arts-based research
6. Project

› Learning Outcomes

Acknowledging the specificity of the field of Cultural Studies, a multi- and interdisciplinary area, and the wide range of objects open to examination, the Methods of Cultural Analysis seminar aims at promoting the understanding of key strategies and methodologies, necessary for the analysis of culture and cultural objects.

The seminar fosters critical thinking and the capacity to develop different types of academic work in a solid and sustained fashion. Students should demonstrate knowledge about culture and the research field, as well as be able to contextualize, interpret and critically analyze the objects of study.

➤ Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

Teaching Methodologies

The seminar is organized in 16 sessions that articulate lectures, discussion of the course syllabus by means of a critical analysis of selected reading material, and analysis and discussion of case studies.

Evaluation

The system of evaluation consists in the continuous assessment of students. Evaluation takes into account the following criteria:

- Attendance, preparation of texts and topics to be discussed in class, participation and other assignments 30%
- Project 50%
 - Written part 30%
 - Oral presentation 20%
- Critical review 20%

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be awarded for the assignment.

Narrative and Culture

Prof. Ana Margarida Abrantes

› Syllabus

Studying narrative and culture involves understanding the narrative ways of knowing and the cultural practice of telling. Cognition mediates this relationship, as it allows the interface between the signification of individual experience and mediation of cultural constructions. Studying narrative in this context unfolds along the lines of post-classical narratology and includes the following topics:

- narrative and other discursive and cognitive genres;
- narratological categories: person, temporality, perspective;
- narrative and storytelling, fact and fiction;
- narrative and mutimediality;
- narrative and the different disciplines;
- narrative, the representation of consciousness and empathy;
- narrative and the construction of (story)worlds.

› Learning Outcomes

Objectives

The course aims at an in-depth understanding of the relationship between narrative and culture, and moreover of the cognitive interface between the two: narrative is hereby understood as a strategy for making sense of the human life-world and for underpinning experience; moreover, the narrative foundation of cultural dynamics will be considered.

Competences

- to identify narrative as a strategy for meaning making and sharing;
- to describe the cultural dimension and outreach of narrative;
- to relate narrative as a conceptual strategy to different cultural practices and contexts of cultural production;
- to relate different theoretical and disciplinary foundations in the study of the relationship between narrative and culture.

➤ Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

Teaching Methodologies

A teaching methodology will be adopted which foresees both research and discussion of the topics proposed. A selection of relevant bibliography will be the starting point for an inquisitive approach to the topics. Direct involvement of participants is intended, namely through their moderation of a session or part of it and the presentation of one of the topics.

Assessment

Assessment is based on three elements:

- qualitative participation in the whole seminar 30%
- moderation of part of a session and presentation of one topic, its foundational concepts and problems 30%
- final written essay 40%

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be awarded for the assignment.

Performance and Performativity: Theories and Practice

Prof. Nuno Crespo

› Syllabus

1. Finding the way back to things: the dismissal of modern rationalism
2. From the language turn to the performative turn: Austin and Wittgenstein
3. “Don’t think look”: Wittgenstein on philosophy as performative understanding and the power of gesture
4. The performative as reflexive openness: to think in broad-minded way (Kant, CPJ, §40)
5. Performance art, the spectator and the techniques of observation
6. “Perhaps she could dance first and think afterwards”: Vera Mantero case study
7. From the theater to the exhibition space

› Learning Outcomes

This seminar intends to discuss the concept of performativity in the context of philosophy and of contemporary art practices, and to provide a critical introduction to the history, methods and central debates of Performance Studies.

The proposal is to discuss not only how the concept of performativity challenged the modern rational program that guided so many philosophical constructions and artistic researches, but also how performativity theories by placing human bodie(s) in the center of reflection promote an idea of enlarged rationality.

The seminar will grant students with a comprehensive understanding of Performance Theory and of Performance Studies as an interdisciplinary and expanding field. The course will engage students in the critical analyses of its foundational texts and methodologies.

➤ Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

The seminar will consist of a mix of lecturing, discussion, and students' presentations of assigned readings.

Students are required to prepare the assigned readings for each session, as assessment is continuous.

Learning assessment is based on the following items and percentages:

- Continuous assessment
(discussion of assigned readings and other assignments) 40%
- Oral presentation + Paper 60%

Attendance is mandatory.

Students who fail to attend 2/3 of sessions will not pass.

Plagiarism will lead to a Fail grade in the seminar

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be awarded for the assignment.

Research Colloquium I

(MA Program)

Prof. Diana Gonçalves

› Syllabus

The course aims at bringing awareness to the different types of scientific work, theories and methodologies. The syllabus is divided into two parts:

1. theoretical and methodological framework (finding a topic, research tools, compilation of information, bibliography, definition of research question);
2. presentation of scientific work and discussion amongst peers.

› Learning Outcomes

The Research Colloquium I constitutes a space for critical reflection about the scientific activity, development of theories and methodologies, and presentation of scientific work. The Seminar aims at:

- improving research and presentation skills and techniques;
- developing critical thinking;
- perfecting academic writing;
- helping students build a solid scientific argument;
- fostering the discussion about processes and results of the scientific work;
- initiating and supporting the development of final works: dissertation, project or internship report.

› Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

Classes are of an essentially practical nature. They consist in the elaboration and presentation of assignments by the students, in articulation with expository moments led by the teacher.

The system of evaluation consists in the continuous assessment of students and attendance is mandatory. Evaluation takes into account the following criteria:

- Attendance, preparation of texts and topics to be discussed in class and participation 15%
- Participation in activities of the Lisbon Consortium/CECC 10%
- Assignments 25%
- Prospectus, oral presentation and debate 50%

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be awarded for the assignment.

Research Colloquium II

(MA Program)

Prof. Luísa Santos

› Syllabus

Research Colloquium II deals with methodological discussions to enable research work within cultural studies by providing helpful frameworks and clear outlines of practice. Besides the theoretical and practical guidance, the seminar aims to develop the understanding of the academic community in the field of Culture Studies and how each individual project makes sense in it. Particular relevance will be given to the role and strategies of dissemination of research in Culture Studies.

1. Research in the interdisciplinary field of Culture Studies
 - 1.1 Theories and legacies of Culture Studies
 - 1.2 Research methods in Culture Studies
 - 1.3 Selecting and applying the most adequate research methods
2. Scientific frames and methodological practices in Culture Studies
 - 2.1 Dissertation and thesis: scientific framework and structure
 - 2.2 Report and project: framework and structure
3. Dissemination of research results in Culture Studies
 - 3.1 The relevance of sharing research in the academic community
 - 3.2 National and international research platforms
 - 3.3 Peer reviewed publications
4. Communication and publication strategies in Culture Studies
 - 4.1 Communicating and presenting research projects
 - 4.2 Publishing research projects
 - 4.3 Submitting papers for publication
5. The role of research in the practices of cultural production

➤ Learning Outcomes

Learning Outcomes

Research Colloquium II deals with the theoretical and practical issues of the research as well as its academic framework at large. With a focus on the understanding of the relevance of sharing research with the academic community, namely through adequate platforms, the seminar will address strategies of dissemination and presentation of research results.

Competences

Apart from advanced reading, interpretation, communication and written skills developed in Research Colloquium I, the seminar aims to foster the following competencies: capacity to identify, select and apply different methodologies within a research project through the use of the appropriate academic language in the disciplinary field of Culture Studies; understand the importance of sharing findings and results to peers and an audience; ability to identify relevant research platforms; develop skills in disseminating research to the academic community, both at national and international levels.

➤ Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

Methodology

The seminar will consist of lecturing, group discussions of assigned reading and writing. Sessions will promote practice-based learning and bring together the close reading of theoretical texts with the development of ability in selecting and applying research methods. Attention will be given to the relevance of disseminating results and practical issues related with publication. Regular class attendance is essential.

Evaluation

The evaluation is continuous and progressive. The final assessment is based on:

- Class participation and attendance 10%
 - Study reading and writing assignments analysis
(1 page each, double spaced, Times New Roman 12) 30%
 - Participation in activities of CECC/The Lisbon Consortium.... 10%
 - Final Assignment..... 50%
- The assignments are based in reading and critical analysis, namely about the methodologies adopted in the texts under study

Paper about the research theme and communication 15min. Form, organisation, argument and selection of adequate methodology will be favoured. Papers written in the frame of an open call for publication in peer reviewed academic publications and / or communications will be favoured.

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be posted for the assignment.

Visual Culture

Prof. Daniel Blaufuks

> Syllabus

- Presentation and analysis of the artistic oeuvre by Daniel
- Blaufuks, in relation to memory, cinema, literature and the Holocaust.
- The propaganda documentary on the Theresienstadt camp.
- The Holocaust as example for all other historical memories.
- Relation between private and public memory, between history and fiction and between shared and hidden memory.
- The archive as existing architecture and as poetic metaphor.

> Learning Outcomes

The unit aims at understanding the artistic work of the lecturer, in relation to other contemporary artists, as well as with literature, cinema and a notion of expanded photography.

In the seminar, we will also watch videos and films by other authors, in order to analyze and establish relations between themselves that will serve as platforms for thought and discussion.

> Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

Seminars

- Presentation of photographic and video/film works
- Class discussions

Evaluation will be based on the following:

- Participation50%
- Analytic text on one of the subjects analyzed..... 50%

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be posted for the assignment.

World Literature

Prof. Jorge Fazenda Lourenço

› Syllabus

What/Where/When is Home?

Patriarchy, Gender, the Body, Desire, Writing, Transgression.

Reading list (see Bibliography):

Sophocles, Antigone

Henrik Ibsen, A Doll's House

Federico García Lorca, The House of Bernarda Alba

Albert Camus, "The Adulterous Wife" (Exile and the Kingdom)

Marguerite Duras, The Lover

› Learning Outcomes

This course, taught in English, aims at fostering the critical competence of reading and interpreting texts, promoting not only interdisciplinary relations and historical, social, political, literary and cultural contextualization, but also the development of competences in argumentation and in oral and written expression.

› Teaching Methodologies and Assessment

Teaching

The teaching methodology rests on the articulation of expository moments led by the teacher and previously scheduled students' oral presentations. Students work completes with a short essay. During weekly office hours, students will benefit from an individualized support given by the teacher in the preparation of their work.

Evaluation

Evaluation is continuous and takes into account the following aspects:

- Attendance and in-class participation 20%
- Oral presentation 30%
- Essay 50%

Any evidence of plagiarism is a disciplinary offense and will result in a penalty. A mark of zero (0) will be awarded for the assignment.

Ecoculture

X Lisbon Summer School for the Study of Culture, Lisbon, July 6 – July 11, 2020

- Recent years have been marked by an alarming escalation of environmental crises, turning climate change, pollution, the depletion of natural resources and mass extinction into some of the most urgent concerns of contemporary society. The X Lisbon Summer School for the Study of Culture, under the topic “Ecoculture”, intends to reflect on the interrelation between culture and the environment, to examine the growing awareness of the negative impact of human activities and to discuss the necessity to rethink, reconceptualize and redefine the relationship between humans and the non-human world.

- The term environment inspires varied meanings and interpretations. Going back to its French roots, environ, the environment is, essentially, what surrounds us. It is usually associated with external physical conditions in which a living organism exists and develops, thus explaining its common usage as synonymous to nature, i.e. something not human and that can be affected by human activity. With this narrow conception of environment, dichotomic assumptions such as man v. environment, culture v. nature, civilization v. wilderness, where one is more valued than the other, multiply. Given its etymology, the term environment hints at a separation between humans and the milieus in which they move, hence spurring the idea of the environment as an entity that exists ‘out there’ and independent of humans, as a place one observes from afar or seeks as refuge. Many scholars have, nonetheless, brought attention to the sense of continuity and interdependence between man and the environment, claiming that the idea of nature necessarily implies the idea of man. Others have also underlined its transcendental essence, the fact that it involves practices and processes, with and without man, that far exceed man’s comprehension.

- The environmental movement emerged in the 1960s, largely influenced by Rachel Carson’s seminal work Silent Spring, which critically analyzed the dangers of the misuse of technology and the risks inherent to humans’ ability to change entire ecosystems. The discussion over environmental issues has expanded enormously since then, not only encompassing questions related to natural phenomena and the interconnectedness of all life but also addressing problems concerning the finitude of human life on the planet (or at least of the existing way of life), inequality and injustice in world structures, as well as logics of domination and oppressive frameworks. What many of these raising questions have in common is the centrality of man and man’s actions. This anthropocentric perspective, which has led to the naming of a new geological era marked by human intervention as Anthropocene, places man, unchallenged, at the center of the environment and everything that happens to it, thus reinforcing the idea of man's supremacy over nature.

- The environment and environmental issues have gained space in academy, both as a discipline and a subject relevant to other areas of knowledge; it has also become a hot topic for many artists and different forms of art (photography, painting, cinema, theater, music, among many others). This fact is corroborated by the proliferation of the 'eco' prefix, which has come to accompany any discussion related to environmental questions. However, the environment and the increasingly more visible environmental changes have also become the source of great social, economic and political friction. More and more movements, sustained by scientific evidence, have gained ground. Fueled by the belief that saving and bettering what Pope Francis called "Our Common Home" is not only a necessity but a duty, they aim at raising awareness, changing minds and altering behaviors. This standpoint is, nevertheless, challenged by the lack of engagement and consensus in terms of a global response, which fails to integrate ecological discourses and practices and deal with environmental problems in an efficient and speedily manner.
- The Lisbon Summer School invites proposals by doctoral students and post-docs that address, though may not be strictly limited to, the topics below:
 - Nature/culture
 - Environment in/and the arts
 - Representations of environmental crises and catastrophes
 - Ecocriticism
 - The Anthropocene
 - Climate change and global warming
 - Pollution, waste and rapidification
 - Extinction of species and living systems
 - Sustainability and ecocitizenship
 - Ecopolitics
 - Ecofeminism
 - Ecojustice
 - Ecotranslation
 - Activism, ecotage, ecoterrorism
 - Landscapes, environments and ecologies
 - Urban ecology
 - Cultural ecology and human ecology
 - Human, non-human, post-human
 - Natural and built environment
 - Digital environments
 - Scientific knowledge, skepticism and manipulation

STUDENT-LED ACTIVITIES

Student-led Seminar (SLS)

Research methods in film studies within the field of culture studies and cultural analysis

February 20-21, 2020

› Seminar Description

The workshop will provide a platform for both a sharing and testing of new methodologies of analysis and for discussing the usefulness of older methodologies in this field of research. This is a student-led workshop that aims at engaging young and senior researchers in an open discussion.

Diffractions

– Graduate Journal for the Study of Culture

DIFFRACTIONS is an online, peer reviewed and open access graduate journal for the study of culture. The journal is published bi-annually under the editorial direction of graduate students in the doctoral program in Culture Studies of the Lisbon Consortium, at Universidade Católica Portuguesa.

DIFFRACTIONS wishes to constitute a platform where graduate students and other young researchers can showcase their current research as well as reviews of the latest books of interest in the field. The scope of the journal is interdisciplinary and transcultural. We welcome submissions from a wide range of disciplines that share a common interest in the multiple ways cultures produce meaning, including but not limited to critical theory, cultural studies, comparative literature, translation studies, postcolonial studies, visual culture, film, media and gender studies, popular culture, creative industries, museum studies, memory studies, amongst others.

DIFFRACTIONS aims at publishing innovative and critical scholarly work at the intersection of disciplinary fields and make it accessible and available to the international community.

Upcoming issues

(Dis-)covering ciphers: objects, voices, bodies

To analyze the ways in which cultural objects acquire meaning can also be understood as looking at the technologies by which those objects have become enciphered. This issue of Diffractions aims to look at the concept of the cipher in its myriad ways of appearing, be they cultural, social, political, technological, linguistic or economic in nature.

Graduate Conference

The Graduate Conference in Culture Studies is held annually and organized by the doctoral students in Culture Studies.

The aim of the conference is to bring together doctoral students, Post-doc and junior researchers from different areas and disciplines to share research interests and works-in-progress, learn and engage in fresh intellectual discussion with international key academics and build a community of young scholars.

The 9th Graduate Conference will take place at Universidade Católica Portuguesa, on December 5-6, 2019, and will address questions related to “Building Narrative: Cultural Interfaces and Spatial Meaning”.

Crossing the perspectives of urban studies, cultural theory and narrative, connecting the fundamentals of architectural thought with a contemporary take on the built environment as a net of infrastructures, interfaces and lived experience, the conference proposes the interdisciplinary reflection on a hybrid territory, where buildings and discourses, practices and ideas, urban texts and literature are retraced in order to stimulate a deeper awareness of cultural spaces and their narratives.

The two-days graduate conference will address a territory defined by the social spaces construction (Lefebvre) and its critical notions of interface (Nawratek), infrastructure in culture (Butler), readability and the experience of urban spaces (Certeau), as well as the city as discourse (Barthes), and the role and influence of spatial singularity by the intersection of all of the elements above (Massey).

The 10th Lisbon Consortium Graduate Conference in Culture Studies will focus on the concept of FACE as an object of artistic, cultural, biological and technological interest. During a two-day Face off in Lisbon participants will be able to confront their ideas about the subject, take part in intellectually challenging discussions and networking with new colleagues.

The Graduate Conference will take place at Universidade Católica Portuguesa on April 2-3, 2020 and aims to discuss the different epistemologies created around the concept of “face”, and bring together researchers from around the world for a face off on how face is experienced and thought in their research areas. How does the face dictate how we perform, how all of our five senses are present in the face, how does the face frame one’s individuality, one’s identity traits or the way one thinks and makes meaning out of the world? How does one bestow meaning to the face? Likewise, can its absence become uncanny, and its invisibility connect to the unknown?

The Lisbon Consortium Clubs

The Lisbon Consortium Clubs is a platform organised by students, for students. It is a space for projects that might otherwise never be realized, where students can express their creative ambitions and develop their original ideas. The Lisbon Consortium Clubs aims to encourage debate, to disrupt established dialogues, develop critical thought and to challenge academic conventions.

The Lisbon Consortium Clubs brings together students from many backgrounds and cultures, from different universities and disciplines, from Portugal and from the rest of the world. It will reach far beyond the confines of the university and the boundaries of academia. It aims to explore arts and cultures, ideas and opinions from all corners of the world, establishing a diverse network of students, events and activities.

The students gather in Lisbon’s cafes and bars, art galleries and lecture theaters to share ideas, to work together, meet new people and discuss their thoughts on the important issues of contemporary culture. They watch films, take photos, read books and make music; organize activities, curate exhibitions and provoke discussions.

PROGRESSION

On these pages you will find all required information concerning how and when your work will be assessed, academic progression and completing your degree.

Progression and Degree requirements

- › To earn the MA degree, students must:
 - Complete 60 ECTS of course work and 12 ECTS of research colloquiums.
 - Complete a Dissertation, a project or an internship with a final report (48 ECTS).

- › To earn a PhD degree, students must:
 - Complete 60 ECTS of course work and 12 ECTS of research colloquiums with a GPA of at least 14/20. The passing grade for each seminar in the doctoral program is 14.
 - Present and publicly defend, by the end of the second year, a thesis project and outline.
 - Complete a doctoral thesis under the supervision of at least one member of the Lisbon Consortium Faculty (108 ECTS). For co-tutelle agreements under the International Doctoral Program in Culture Studies, the thesis must be supervised by one member of the Lisbon Consortium faculty and one faculty member of the partner institution.

Assessment methods

- › You will encounter a variety of methods of summative (for credit) assessment during your studies. You should always refer to the course syllabus to make sure you understand exactly what is required of you in your assessment for a particular course. If you are uncertain, you should speak to the course lecturer.

- › Assessment at the School of Human Sciences is continuous, which means that you will be assessed through attendance (a minimum of 2/3 is mandatory), participation and final examination (usually a written assignment, but depends on the course).

- › Assessment of the Lisbon Summer School will be based on the presentation of a paper (doctoral students) and a poster (master students)

Grading system and marking criteria

- › In the national grading system, the results are awarded in a scale from 0 to 20, and the minimum mark required for approval is 10. For doctoral students, the minimum mark required for approval is 14.

18 to 20	Excellent
16 and 17	Very good
14 and 15	Good
10 to 13	Sufficient
0 to 9	Fail

› Plagiarism & related forms of cheating

The Program treats plagiarism as a serious academic offence. Plagiarized assignments will be automatically excluded from evaluation.

Students should be careful when preparing their work that all source material is correctly referenced. Incorrect or missing references can be construed as plagiarism, even if unintentional.

The following are to be treated as plagiarism:

- Verbatim plagiarism: copying language word for word from another source.
- Mosaic plagiarism: copying bits and pieces from a source or several sources without crediting them.
- Inadequate paraphrase: language too close to the original source when you use your own words to describe someone else's idea.
- Uncited paraphrase: in addition to paraphrasing the source material with your own words, you also need to cite the source.
- Uncited quotation: it is not enough to use quotation marks when citing a source, you also need to indicate the source (Author, year: page).

Note also that credit can only be given once for a particular piece of assessed work. Submitting the same piece of work (or a significant part thereof) twice for assessment will be regarded as cheating.

MA and PhD programs in Culture Studies

Best practices and guidelines

1. Graduate Education:

High-quality graduate education depends upon professional and ethical conduct by all participants. The following guidelines delineate practices that will promote execution of our academic responsibilities and foster quality graduate education, focusing on the three major components of master and doctoral education within the University: the graduate program, the faculty advisor and the graduate student.

1.a

The MA and PhD programs in Culture Studies shall:

1. Provide for prospective and continuing students the following information: the specific requirements for achieving particular advanced degrees; the forms of funding available and the procedures for receipt and continuation of financial support;
2. Inform students of university policies affecting them such as those on intellectual policy, and misconduct in research.

1.b

Faculty Advisors should:

- Serve as intellectual and professional mentors to their graduate students, by:
 - helping students develop the relevant professional skills required by the program;
 - helping more advanced students design research that takes advantage of their individual interests and strengths and can be completed in a timely manner;
 - encouraging, by example and precept, a dedication to honest, accurately reported research and high-quality teaching.
- Provide students with evaluation of their progress and performance in an objective manner at frequent and mutually understood intervals. It is especially important for faculty to provide students with timely and clear advice when their performance is deficient or their lack of progress might prevent them from attaining the desired degree.
- Prepare students to be competitive for employment, by:
 - acknowledging student contributions to research presented

N.B. This document does not substitute the School of Human Science's Doctoral Studies Bylaws. It substantiates the internal norms, requirements and expectations for students enrolled in the MA and PhD programs in Culture Studies at UCP.

- at conferences, in professional publications, or in applications for copyrights;
- encouraging graduate students to participate in professional meetings, perform or display their work in public settings, and publish the results of their research;
- providing a realistic view of the field and the current job market and making use of professional contacts for the benefit of their students.
- Maintain a high level of professionalism, including:
 - excusing themselves from participating in committee decisions regarding any student with whom they have a relationship that could result in a conflict of interest;
 - never impeding a graduate student’s progress toward the degree or toward employment in order to benefit from the student’s proficiency as a teaching or research assistant;
 - interacting with students, staff, and faculty colleagues in a professional and civil manner, and in accordance with University policies.

1.c

Graduate Students should:

- Understand the following elements of the faculty advisors’ role:
 - the faculty advisor provides the intellectual and instructional environment in which the student conducts research;
 - the faculty advisor is responsible for monitoring the accuracy, validity, and integrity of the student’s research;
 - faculty advisors should be informed at regular intervals on matters related to research and progress with the degree program.
- Take primary responsibility for informing themselves of the regulations and policies governing their financial responsibilities to the university (See MEC/DEC FINANCIAL), degree and course requirements, and research activities. This may involve:
 - consulting information provided on the Lisbon Consortium’s and FCH’s websites; be informed of the registrar’s notes or guidelines for graduate students; reading information directly provided by the Lisbon Consortium and the Graduate Studies Office; and seeking clarification from the Lisbon Consortium’s Executive Coordinator or the Program Director when they are uncertain about the precise meaning or application of a regulation or policy statement.
- Exercise high professional standards in all aspects of their work. This includes:
 - observing the University’s policy on research misconduct;
 - maintaining absolute integrity in taking examinations, writing papers and in collecting, analyzing, and presenting research data;

- taking special care to identify sources clearly in order to avoid future confusion or disputes about access or ownership;
- acknowledging the contributions of the faculty advisor and other members of the research team to the student's work in all publications and conference presentations. (It is also appropriate to acknowledge the sources of financial support, such as FCT);
- acknowledging affiliation with the program and University (Lisbon Consortium, UCP) at all conferences, presentations and papers published;
- interacting with faculty, staff and other students in a mature, professional, and civil manner in accordance with university policies.

2. Progress requirements

MA Program

The academic progress requirements for master students in Culture Studies include a minimum grade point average (GPA) of 10 in every single seminar taken during the curricular period, including in the 3rd and 4th semester research seminars.

Failure to achieve a minimum grade of 10 will necessarily require the retaking of the course.

Any student who fails to maintain registration during the regular academic year will be withdrawn from the master's program. If a student later wishes to resume study, she or he will be subject to the reinstatement policies and fees in effect for that academic year.

PhD Program

The academic progress requirements for doctoral students in Culture Studies include a minimum grade point average (GPA) of 14 in every single seminar taken during the curricular period, including in the 3rd and 4th semester research seminars.

Failure to achieve a minimum grade of 14 will necessarily require the retaking of the course.

During the second year of registration, doctoral students will present a doctoral project for discussion. The examination committee will be composed of the Program Director, the supervisor and one or two external faculty members. The discussion will be assessed with a Pass or Fail note. Failure to pass in the Project Viva will result in exclusion from the program. The Viva may not be retaken.

Students enrolled in the joint degree program with the Universities of Giessen, Copenhagen or PUC-Rio, should be aware that secondments at the partner universities may only occur once the curricular credits are completed and the project viva has occurred.

Any student who fails to maintain registration during the regular academic year will be withdrawn from the doctoral program. If a student later wishes to resume study, she or he will be subject to the reinstatement policies and fees in effect for that academic year.

Faculty Advisors

Based on similar interests identified during the application process and the curricular period, an advisor is assigned to each student at the end of the second semester. This primary advisor (or co-advisors in some cases) assists the student in planning a program of study to meet degree requirements. However, should the student's research later diverge from the advisor's area of expertise or specialization, or irreconcilable differences may occur between the student and the faculty advisor, the student or the faculty member may request a change in assignment. The process for changing advisors requires the submission of an advisor change to the Scientific Board of the School of Human Sciences. This also requires the approval of the new advisor by the Program Director. Students typically select and initiate contact with a new advisor, but in cases where this is not possible, the Program Director may help in assigning a new advisor.

PhD Supervision requirements

The research team is a successful blend of experienced high impact researchers, mid-career academics and young up-coming scholars. In order to assure that experience, rigor and creativity are engagingly brought together, team members must fulfil two of the following criteria in order to be able to act as advisors: a) co-ordination or participation (as staff member) in international research training networks; b) at least three years of university teaching experience as PhD holder; c) co-ordination of at least one FCT, DFG, Danish Research Agency or other projects funded by science supporting agencies or foundations; d) at least one book published with an international publisher, or two national books or edited collection of essays, or three articles in international indexed peer-reviewed journals. These minimum requirements ensure that experienced and early stage academics will jointly promote an intensive scientific dialogue with students and assure the program's future academic sustainability.

3. Master and Doctoral Proposal Overview and Format

MA Program

The Decree-law 74/2006, 24th March, which stipulates the new rules for the second cycle (Master's Degree) within the Bologna Framework, details the types of final assignment required to obtain this qualification with three options available: dissertation, project work or professional internship with a final report.

Each of these options is subject to public discussion by a jury. Whilst the dissertation is the usual means of obtaining a Master's Degree and the professional internship has over the course of years represented a very common practice for students attending the first cycle of studies (undergraduate), there remains the need to better specify what is expected from each of these options from both a scientific and academic point of view.

Dissertation – Text of up to 200,000 characters.

Project work – the work based on a project consists of a proposal for a product or service, the development of an activity or improvements to structures or intervention programs duly grounded in theoretical and methodological principles. For example: developing an education service for a museum; restructure cultural equipments. The scale of this work is identical to that of the internship project. The assessment of the project focuses fundamentally on evaluating its capacity to critically analyze the study object, its innovation, the appropriateness of the project in light of the observed reality as well as the positioning, justification and originality of the project proposed. The project work requires supervision by an FCH doctoral degree holder (supervisor) and, whenever necessary, a professional of recognized merit. The project and internship report may take various modes: i) collaboration in research projects conducted at Research Centres at FCH, ii) development of the professional practices engaged in by students; iii) undertaking an internship.

Internship with final report – the report based on a professional internship should represent a scientifically based document and necessarily contain the formulation of a problem and conceptual framework with the respective implementation, choice and construction of the tools and methods of professional intervention, a brief description of the contents of the internship and an evaluation of the professional practices engaged in, alongside recommendations as regards future interventions, irrespective of any other work required by the entity hosting the internship.

The assessment of this final report should fundamentally focus upon evaluating its capacity for reflecting on the professional future and correspondingly taking into account the level of the problematization, theorization, analysis and interpretation of a particular reality and its professional positioning.

The scale of the report submitted to the University should not exceed 200,000 characters (cf. art. 12 of the Master's Degree Regulations).

The internship requires supervision by both an FCH doctoral degree holder (supervisor) and a member of the host institution (coach), who are expected to articulate.

PhD Program

Students are urged to begin thinking about a dissertation topic early in their degree program. In defining a dissertation topic, the student collaborates with her or his advisor in the choice of a topic for the dissertation.

The dissertation proposal is a comprehensive statement on the extent and nature of the student's dissertation research interests. The student must provide a written copy of the proposal to the faculty committee no later than two weeks prior to the date of the proposal hearing. Committee members may require an earlier deadline (e.g., four weeks before the hearing).

The major components of the proposal are as follows:

1. A detailed statement of the problem that is to be studied and the context within which it is to be seen. This should include a justification of the importance of the problem on both theoretical and educational grounds.
2. A thorough review of the literature pertinent to the research problem. This review should provide proof that the relevant literature in the field has been thoroughly researched. Good research is cumulative; it builds on the thoughts, findings, and mistakes of others.
3. A statement on the overall design of the proposed study, which includes:
 - its general explanatory interest
 - the overall theoretical framework within which this interest is to be pursued
 - the model or hypotheses to be tested or the research questions to be answered
 - a discussion of how the evidence is to be interpreted.

4. Fundamental Standards and Code of Conduct

UCP'S Code of Conduct (approved in 2016) expects students to show both within and without the University such respect for order, morality, personal honor and the rights of others as is demanded of good citizens. Failure to do this will be sufficient cause for removal from the University.

Actions found to be in violation of the Code include:

1. Physical Assault
2. Property damage; attempts to damage University property
3. Theft, including theft of University property such as street signs, furniture, and library books
4. Forgery, such as signing a fellow student's signature to an attendance card
5. Plagiarism
6. Harassment or abusive and discriminatory misconduct (sexual, racial or religious).

Infractions may lead to penalties ranging from formal warning to expulsion, approved by the Rector. In each case, the nature and seriousness of the offense, the motivation underlying the offense, and precedent in similar cases are considered by a Board set up by the School of Human Sciences and chaired by the UCP's Ethics Ombudsperson.

Other examples pertaining to the regular progress of the PhD program are:

7. Copying from another's paper or allowing another to copy from one's own paper
8. Unpermitted collaboration
9. Revising and resubmitting a quiz or exam for re-grading, without the instructor's knowledge and consent
10. Giving or receiving unpermitted aid on a take-home examination
11. Representing as one's own work the work of another
12. Giving or receiving aid on an academic assignment under circumstances in which a reasonable person should have known that such aid was not permitted

Plagiarism penalties are a “Fail” or “No Pass” grade for the seminar in which the violation occurred. The standard penalty for a multiple violation (e.g. cheating more than once in the same course or repeated plagiarism) is expulsion from the program.

Students are also advised that they may not use the same paper or other coursework to satisfy the requirements of more than one course or degree.

5. Degree Progress Checklist

MA Program

1. Maintained enrollment or registration status in each quarter of the regular academic year.
2. Satisfied English language proficiency.
3. Master’s dissertation/project/internship report submitted on time.
4. Completed dissertation/project/report and viva.

PhD Program

1. Maintained enrollment or registration status in each quarter of the regular academic year.
2. Satisfied English language proficiency.
3. Earned at least 80 ECTS credits before secondment as well as doctoral project approval.
4. Submitted and defended doctoral project (3rd/4th semesters).
5. Doctoral dissertation submitted on time.
6. Completed doctoral dissertation and viva.

Norms for the presentation of a Master's Dissertation/Project/Internship Report, Doctoral Project and Doctoral Thesis

The Program attaches great importance to its students acquiring the skills needed to present academic work properly and with appropriate annotation. The Style Guide for MA dissertations/projects/internship reports and PhD projects and theses should be followed when submitting work for assessment (please refer to the following section).

1. Length

Master's Degree (Dissertation/Project/Internship Report): 200,000 characters, without spaces and not including indexes, annexes, sources or the bibliography.

PhD Degree:

Project: 50,000 characters, without spaces, including bibliography. Not including indexes and annexes.

Thesis: 600,000 characters, without spaces and not including indexes, annexes, sources or the bibliography.

2. Structure and organization

PhD Project:

- Abstract
- State of the Art
- Research Questions and Goals
- Proposal of Table of Contents/Structure of Thesis
- Theoretical Framework and Methodology
- Brief Description of Chapters
- Planification of Development of Thesis (Chronogram)
- Bibliography

MA Dissertation and PhD Thesis:

Master's Degree Dissertations/Projects/Internship Reports and Doctoral Degree Theses necessarily include an Introduction and a Conclusion as well as a Bibliography and are divided into Chapters with the latter able to be structured into Sections.

- The Introduction and Conclusion are of a shorter length than the average chapter whilst the latter is also shorter than the former.

- The Parts (facultative) are categorised by Roman numerals (I, II, III).
- The Chapters respectively follow the Arabic numerals (1, 2, 3).
- The Sub-Chapters, Sections and all their respective divisions are also numbered (1.1, 1.2, 1.2.1).
- The dissertation and thesis may contain Appendices or Annexes, which are structured according to alphabetical order (A, B, C).
- The Footnotes follow Arabic numerals (1, 2, 3).

Master's Dissertations, Projects or Internship Reports and Doctoral Theses should present the following structure (details in bold are obligatory):

Cover (cf. FCH Regulations)

First page (cf. FCH Regulations)

Abstract in Portuguese/English

Dedication

Acknowledgements

Table of Contents

Preface

Introduction

Chapters

Conclusion

Bibliography

Final Notes

Annexes.

3. Bibliographical references

The Bibliography identifies the author, the year of publication (and the year of the first edition whenever different), the title of the book, the publisher and location and are listed in alphabetical order according to the surnames of their authors.

References (in-text citations, footnotes and bibliography) should follow the Chicago Author-Date Style Guide.

4. Style guide

Font:	Times 12 (except quotations longer than three lines and footnotes)
Spacing:	1.5
Margins:	3 cm in all except for the right margin with 2.5 cm
Between paragraphs:	leave one line in space or indent the first line in each paragraph (0.7 or 1 cm)
Quotations of up to 100 words:	in the body of the text
Quotations of over 100 words:	Times 11, with 1 space, indented on both margins by 1 cm as regards the main text
Footnotes:	Times 10, with 1 space, on the page making the respective reference
Bibliography:	Times 12 and 1.5 spaces

Norms for Internships

The Office of Career Services (OCS) supports the students of the Lisbon Consortium for the completion of national, international, curricular and/or extra-curricular internships.

National Internships

Internships taking place in Portugal can be Curricular or Extra-Curricular in nature:

Curricular Internships

- only those internships included in the curriculum of the 3rd semester of the Master's. If duly justified, the Coordination of the Master's Program may authorize an internship in the 4th semester;
- destined exclusively to those master's students that have opted for the internship option with a final report;
- duration of the internship: a minimum of 4 months; and a maximum of 6 months;
- Timing: starting preferably in the 3rd semester;
- internship proposals: the organizations that receive interns are proposed by the students and analyzed by the internship coordinator following a meeting with the student; the internship plan must clearly relate to the curriculum of the Master's program;
- process: initial contacts with the organizations that will receive the intern may be made by the internship coordinator or by the student (self-proposed internships). In the case of self-proposed internships, these will need to be approved by the internship coordinator.

Extra-Curricular Internships

- internships which are not included in the curriculum of the program;
- in Portugal, any organization may receive extra-curricular internships. However, if the institution requires an internship contract with the School, the rules are as follows:
 - Extra-curricular internships with contracts with the School may not exceed 3 months duration, unless they are paid monthly, at a salary that is equal to or greater than the national minimum wage (as required under Portuguese law);
 - The School will charge students a fee of €65, which covers: registration and contract; extra insurance against personal accidents in the students' name; evaluation services and certification;
 - For the purposes of evaluation and certification of these extra-curricular internships, the students must submit an internship report (no longer than 3 pages).

International Internships

these are internships that take place outside of Portugal and they may be curricular or extra-curricular:

Curricular Internships

- definition: internships included in the 3rd semester of the Master's. If duly justified, the Coordination of the Master's Program may authorize an internship in the 4th semester.
- exclusively for master's students that are opting for the internship option with final report;
- duration: a minimum of 4 months; and maximum of 6 months;
- Timing: starting preferably in the 3rd semester;
- internship proposals: organizations that will receive interns are proposed by the student (self-proposed internship) and must be approved by the Internship Coordinator;
- process: Contacts between the receiving organization and the student making the proposal for an internship there (self-proposed internship) must be approved by the Internship Coordinator;
- the Office for International Internships (Clementina Santos) provides support to the students for their proposal for an international internship;
- Grants: internships which take place in countries of the EU may benefit from a mobility grant. Candidates for such grants should be made through the Office of International Internships.

Extra-Curricular Internships

- definition: internships which are not included in the curriculum of the program;
- Timing: 3rd and 4th semesters of the Master's, as long as they do not interfere with attendance at required seminars;
- Duration: extra-curricular internships contracted with the School may not exceed 3 months duration;
 - Fees: the college charges students a fee of €65 which includes: registration and contract services; extra insurance for personal accidents in the student's name; evaluation services and certification.
 - For the purposes of evaluation and certification of these extra-curricular contracted internships, the students must submit an internship report (no longer than 3 pages);
 - Grants: internships that take place in EU countries may benefit from a mobility grant, so long as they have a minimum duration of at least 2 months. Candidates should visit the office of international internships for more information.
 - Extra-curricular international internships, as a rule, do not release the student from required seminar attendance, nor do they allow for the substitution of seminars. In case a student cannot attend a Research Colloquium due to the length of the extra-curricular international internship, the student should ask permission to the Coordinator of the Master's Program to replace the Research Colloquium for another Seminar.

RESEARCH @ THE LISBON CONSORTIUM

Research Centre for Communication and Culture (CECC)

The research conducted within the MA and PhD in Culture Studies is anchored at the Research Centre for Communication and Culture.

The aim of the Research Centre for Communication and Culture (CECC) is to promote and develop research in the areas of culture, literature, translation, language, and communication sciences, from a multidisciplinary perspective and encouraging relations between these different fields of knowledge, as well as the relations of each of them with other scientific areas.

Research Lines

Cognition and Translatability

Coordinator: Peter Hanenberg

The group Cognition and Translatability (CaT) has initially worked under the Title “Translating Europe across the Ages” and between 2015 and 2017 under the title “Culture, Translation and Cognition”. The first years of its work were dedicated to the conceptualization of translation as key to understanding European Culture. Studies on Translation History as well as analyses of European narratives and discourses have been one main research focus and led to a wide range of books, articles and conferences. In a second phase, the group addressed the cognitive dimension of culture and translation. On the assumption that culture shapes the mind, translation is the process in which this modulation can be observed. Translation as the negotiation of meaning across cultures is certainly a driving factor in our globalized world – and translatability a condition for any conviviality between cultures.

The dynamics of cognition and translatability will be the focus of research over the next years. Under the keywords Intramental Translation (introduced in recent publications by the group) and Cognitive Poetics (as an internationally established field of research), under the perspective of its translational dimension, the group seeks to offer interdisciplinary insights which should be relevant beyond a limited definition of the Humanities. The new group established by CECC under the title Literature and the Global Contemporary emerged out of CaT and will certainly develop its activities in strong cooperation with it. The conference series on Translation Studies will give continuity to one of CECC's scientific landmarks, highly recognized nationally and internationally. The group will further continue its strong international networking and its outreach activities, namely in the collaboration with the Health Institute at UCP or the Católica Languages and Translation.

Culture, Art and Conflict

Coordinator: Isabel Capeloa Gil

The Group Culture, Art and Conflict (CAC) builds on a consistent 10-year research agenda aimed at understanding difference and conflict as basic meaning making strategies. By using a critical-interpretative approach, with a clear historical-contextual intent, as well as empirical methodologies, CAC produces theoretically informed original scholarship that questions the ways in which cultural, literary and media criticism engage with the complexity arising from the awareness of conflictual interaction. CAC fosters a dialogue on the multiple ways in which conflict supports and constrains the production of meaning in modernity, how the representation of conflict across several media works and how it frames scholarship within the humanities. Its research focuses on the role played by the arts (literature, visual arts, film and performance) in the double work of conflict as creation and disruption.

The group will first articulate empirical and practice-based work on the production of artistic work in conflict situations (from the post 'Cold' war and Portuguese Colonial War to the Iraq and Syria wars) and a) representational conflicts and the memory of the event; b) 'artchiving' conflict and the structure of technological mediation; c) artistic practices and the transition to conviviality. Secondly, the group will also take a meta approach to propose a reflection on the theories and practices that have structured the intellectual discourse of the humanities and how these are impacted by the tensional lines of recent societal development (war and forced migration; new colonialisms; digital exclusion; surveillance and the demise of privacy; conflicting notions of humanity; planetary exhaustion).

The ‘Conflicted Humanities’ approach will place the methodological and conceptual framework of humanistic research at the center of a new discourse about the changing place of human culture and the academic humanities in general under the persistent violence of the 21st century.

Media Narratives and Cultural Memory

Coordinator: Nelson Ribeiro

The Group investigates how established and emerging media forms (re)create and disseminate narratives that simplify social, political and cultural phenomena, impacting on the process of meaning-making among different publics. Research conducted within the group adopts a transnational, transcultural, and transmedia approach, investigating how our perception of the past is the result of mediation processes and how our understanding of the present is informed by media narratives that allow the past to be made present and shape our perceptions of contemporary events. Researchers are involved in projects dealing with the role played by the media in promoting and countering transnational identities and transcultural memories, namely the ongoing Leverhulme funded project “Connecting the Wireless World: writing global radio history”; the COST Action NEP4DISSENT- Research on East European Cultures of Dissent; and the project “Entangled Media Histories” funded by the Swedish Foundation STINT. Other projects investigate how change within media systems alter the processes of narrative creation and dissemination within and through the media. As an example, CECC is a partner of the H2020 project “COMPACT–Social Media and Convergence” that aims to increase awareness on how social media and convergence are altering the way individuals access and make sense of news and other media narratives.

In the 2018-22 period, particular attention will be given to the development of research training activities. 2019 will see the launch of the “Lisbon Winter School for the Study of Communication”, organized in partnership with the Annenberg School for Communication (U Pennsylvania), U Tampere and Chinese U of Hong Kong. This annual School will bring doctoral students and senior researchers to CECC to debate, in a global setting, methodologies and theories that shall advance research on media narratives and memory.

Literature and the Global Contemporary

Coordinator: Alexandra Lopes

Literature and The Global Contemporary is a newly founded research group that comprises 9 researchers working in Literary Studies. Coming from different backgrounds and research experiences, its members include seasoned researchers with well-established research careers, as well as promising young researchers. Their individual work focuses on a wide range of interests and projects, including literature, comparative literature, literary theory and criticism, and literary translation.

The group's diversity extends to its members' intellectual traditions, which comprehend various national literatures, as well as literary history, theory and criticism, comparative literature, translation and culture studies. This diversity constitutes a most promising feature, as this heterogeneity is founded on a common goal that is best summed up in Sontag's idea of what literature does: 'It [literature] connects me with an enterprise that is over 2,000 years old. What do we have from the past? Art and thought. That's what lasts'.

As a group, its members are invested in developing a collective agenda that combines their interests around a literary problem. This will take the shape of regular meetings in which issues, methods and topics will be discussed, thus producing a common reflexive fabric that provides structure and identity to individual and group projects.

The group's major future contribution to the I&D Unit translates into 3 different areas: (a) the reinforcement of the theoretical and conceptual framework of CECC as a center registered in the field of Literary Studies; (b) an in-depth discussion of the nature and functions of the literary in the global present, articulating it with literature's century-long legacy and the role it can play in the future metamorphoses of Western culture; (c) reflection on the reciprocal shaping of the literary and culture and technology.

Digital Literacy & Cultural Change

Coordinator: Carla Ganito

The group will focus on understanding change in the everyday life of people and organizations, and the transformation that results from digital technologies. The aim is to develop not only innovative and solid academic research, but also applied work with the industry and creative hubs.

Following up on the work previously conducted by its members, the group will pursue research on digital literacy and digital readership, namely on digital archives and educational contexts. Researchers will also look at narrative and its modes of production, such as transmedia and cross-media, as well as models centered on user-generated content, like 'produsage' and remix, and the growing relevance of digital storytelling for brands and corporate reputation. Close attention will also be given to how people perceive value and use the media in their everyday lives, especially regarding children, youth and families, addressing this topic from an international comparative perspective.

The group intends to explore digital technologies as drivers of social development, increased literacy levels and well-being from a critical perspective. What are the challenges posed by smart living and smart cities? Researchers will also look at the social and technological changes throughout the life course and the impact on the experience of aging.

Activities

9TH GRADUATE CONFERENCE IN CULTURE STUDIES Building Narrative: Cultural Interfaces and Spatial Meaning

Date: December 5-6, 2019

Venue: School of Human Sciences

Universidade Católica Portuguesa - Lisbon

The 9th Graduate Conference in Culture Studies, titled “Building Narrative: Cultural Interfaces and Spatial Meaning”, is organized by PhD researchers in Culture Studies at the Lisbon Consortium (FCH-UCP). The conference will take place on 5 and 6 December 2019 and proposes the interdisciplinary reflection on a hybrid territory, where buildings and discourses, practices and ideas, urban texts and literature are retraced in order to stimulate a deeper awareness of cultural spaces and their narratives.

The conference will discuss both theoretical insights, as well as concrete practices, case studies, experiences and experiments by architects, artists, designers, planners, project managers, curators and other cultural agents with an ongoing interest for the urban realm as medium and open-ended material reality, as well as a cultural and civilizational horizon. Aiming at the acknowledgement of the complexity of the urban scape as cultural product and workable-habitable context. The conference aims at fostering a cross-disciplinary debate, so that many and diverse aspects of the contemporary urban experience may be critically, productively and even poetically articulated. Research related to the understanding of the urban sensescape of today, to the rhetoric of space and its narrations, as well as spatial politics and policies in the city are welcome. The conference’s aim is to engage participants in a debate where narrative, architecture and urban theory meet in order to inspire the public to rediscover the care for the urban fabric as a crucial endeavor of contemporaneity.

Keynote Speakers include Dominique Brossard (University of Wisconsin-Madison), Sonia Livingstone (London School of Economics and Political Science), Fathali Moghaddam (Georgetown University), Victor Pickard (University of Pennsylvania), Carla Ganito (Universidade Católica Portuguesa), Saskia Witteborn (Chinese University of Hong Kong), Teresa Ashe (The Open University), James Painter (University of Oxford), Esa Väiliverronen (University of Helsinki).

2nd LISBON WINTER SCHOOL FOR THE STUDY OF COMMUNICATION Media and Uncertainty

Date: January 7-11, 2020

Venue: School of Human Sciences

Universidade Católica Portuguesa - Lisbon

Jointly organized by the Faculty of Human Sciences (Universidade Católica Portuguesa), the Center for Media@Risk at the Annenberg School for Communication (University of Pennsylvania), the School of Journalism and Communication (Chinese University of Hong Kong), the Department of Media and Communications (London School of Economics and Political Science) and the Faculty of Social Sciences (University of Helsinki), the Second Lisbon Winter School for the Study of Communication will take a comparative and global approach to the study of media and uncertainty across time. It will consider how uncertainty is molding the media in different geographies and how societies rely on the media to deal with moments of uncertainty.

Keynote Speakers at the event include Dominique Brossard (University of Wisconsin-Madison), Sonia Livingstone (London School of Economics and Political Science), Fathali Moghaddam (Georgetown University), Victor Pickard (University of Pennsylvania), Carla Ganito (Universidade Católica Portuguesa), Saskia Witteborn (Chinese University of Hong Kong), Teresa Ashe (The Open University), James Painter (University of Oxford), Esa Väliverronen (University of Helsinki)

10th GRADUATE CONFERENCE IN CULTURE STUDIES

The Face Of(f)

Date: April 2-3, 2020

Venue: School of Human Sciences

Universidade Católica Portuguesa - Lisbon

The X Lisbon Consortium Graduate Conference in Culture Studies will focus on the concept of FACE as an object of artistic, cultural, biological and technological interest. During a two-day Face off in Lisbon participants will be able to confront their ideas about the subject, take part in intellectually challenging discussions and networking with new colleagues.

FACE is everywhere. It has travelled through a variety of cultural expressions, serving as an object of affection (e.g. photo albums, paintings), lending itself towards obsession (e.g. Narcissus and Dorian Gray), serving as a metaphor (e.g. 'to lose one's face') or giving name to one of the most powerful enterprises in the world – Facebook. It has been a locus of fetishization and power, represented through historical portraiture in sculpture, paintings and photography, from Greta Garbo's divinity complexion in Queen Christina (Barthes 2007, 74) to the imperial portraits of Majesties and Kings (Mirzoeff 2015). It is also through the face that humans engage in recognition of both themselves as well as the other. The face operates as a sensorial platform for communication and dialogue (Lévinas 1982) for verbal, non-verbal and sign languages.

Faces may also be of a terrifying nature, dysmorphic traits serving as visage for alterity and difference, prompting to a state of conflict and uncertainty through confrontation, such as in the myth of Medusa or in Mary Shelley's Frankenstein. We see the face invading our everyday lives, constantly exhibited on social media, as a means of communicating with others, as well as negotiating our own identity online. Digital technologies, in particular, have explored the face in a variety of contexts, promoting, for instance, photo filters and face-tuning apps, or developing facial recognition systems and databases.

FACE can also be understood from a perspective of absence or concealment, leading us towards the usage of digital avatars, masks and veils, many of which are sometimes paralleled with cultural and religious celebrations.

We aim to discuss the different epistemologies created around the concept of "face", and bring together researchers from around the world for a face off on how face is experienced and thought in their research areas. How does the face dictate how we perform, how all of our five senses are present in the face, how does the face frame one's individuality, one's identity traits or the way one thinks and makes meaning out of the world? How does one bestow meaning to the face? Likewise, can its absence become uncanny, and its invisibility connect to the unknown?

X LISBON SUMMER SCHOOL FOR THE STUDY OF CULTURE

Ecoculture

Date: July 6-11, 2020

Venue: School of Human Sciences

Universidade Católica Portuguesa – Lisbon

Recent years have been marked by an alarming escalation of environmental crises, turning climate change, pollution, the depletion of natural resources and mass extinction into some of the most urgent concerns of contemporary society. The X Lisbon Summer School for the Study of Culture, under the topic “Ecoculture”, intends to reflect on the interrelation between culture and the environment, to examine the growing awareness of the negative impact of human activities and to discuss the necessity to rethink, reconceptualize and redefine the relationship between humans and the non-human world.

The environment and environmental issues have gained space in academy, both as a discipline and a subject relevant to other areas of knowledge; they have also become a hot topic for many artists and different forms of art (photography, painting, cinema, theater, music, among many others). This fact is corroborated by the proliferation of the ‘eco’ prefix, which has come to accompany any discussion related to environmental questions. However, the environment and the increasingly more visible environmental changes have also become the source of great social, economic and political friction. More and more movements, sustained by scientific evidence, have gained ground. Fueled by the belief that saving and bettering what Pope Francis called “Our Common Home” is not only a necessity but a duty, they aim at raising awareness, changing minds and altering behaviors. This standpoint is, nevertheless, challenged by the lack of engagement and consensus in terms of a global response, which fails to integrate ecological discourses and practices and deal with environmental problems in an efficient and speedily manner.
